ABSTRACT

This 1977 edition contains references to all New York state history-related works which were either published, completed, or in progress during 1977. Works which presented new knowledge on any aspect of the history of New York state are included. Entries cover books, pamphlets, graduate theses, and journal and magazine articles. Reprints and revised editions of cut-of-print books are included, but newspaper and newsletter features are not. All entries are categorized under 17 topics: American Revolution; archaeology; art and the arts; calendars and maps; economics; education; family history and genealogy; government, politics, and the law; local history; medicine; military history and welfare; racial, ethnic, and women's history; religion and church history; social and intellectual history; transportation; and urban studies. Each entry provides information on the title, author, publisher and address, page length, notice of illustrations and charts, and appendices or bibliographies if included. Some entries are annotated. Three sections in each category list documents published in 1977, additions to Research in Publications-1976, and those in progress in 1977. Concluding sections are an appendix of periodical literature on New York State history and an index which is the principal finding aid for the bibliography. (KC)

RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS IN NEW YORK STATE HISTORY

THE FIRST TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

From 1952 to 1968, an annual bibliography entitled "New York State and Local Research in Progress" was compiled by the State Historian's office and was printed as a section of the July issue of NEW YORK HISTORY magazine. Those early listings were rather informal, usually no more than a page or two in length, and typically consisted of publications and projects that had been brought to the attention of the State Historian.

By 1968, the number of people engaged in researching and writing State and local history had become so large that a separately published annual bibliography was needed. In that year, the Office of State History developed the "research in progress" idea into a new format titling the resultant bibliography, RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS IN NEW YORK STATE HISTORY. That work embraced the information sources of its predecessor, enlisted the cooperation of the New York State Library's local history section, and invited contributions from researchers and writers. The product was a much larger, topically arranged, cross-referenced bibliography that appeared four times between 1969 and 1972. The 1971-72 edition was the last volume published by the Office of State History.

In 1976, the Office of State History was reorganized as the Division of Historical Services and was transferred to the New York State Museum. In that year, the Division manifested its concern for the research and writing of State and local history by reviving the annual compilation of new titles and works in progress as the most effective way to serve the diverse segments of New York's historical community. The scope of the project was expanded and there were other changes as well. The 1976 edition of RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS IN NEW YORK STATE HISTORY sought to include all new New York State history-related work published, revised, reprinted, or otherwise issued or completed, and also all appropriate research and writing in progress during calendar 1976.

Like its predecessors, the 1976 edition was organized topically, but for the first time the bibliography was divided into published and in-progress sections. Also, each publication or project was described in detail and individual annotations were given for most of the entries. Several new categories were added, most notably sections on the American Revolution and Family History. Reprints and revised editions were systematically incorporated, an appendix of periodicals was included, and a thirteen-page, double-columned index to the 112-page work was added for the first time.

The most important innovation, however, occurred in the method of compilation. In 1976, the Division of Historical Services staff actively solicited entries. News releases on the project were printed in appropriate journals and newsletters. Publishers of books and periodicals, printers, teachers, writers, editors, and compilers of New York history and of New York history-related works were personally contacted and encouraged to contribute to the compilation. All known professional and officially appointed local historians were also invited to participate. Beyond that, appropriate bibliographies, publications catalogs, and countless journals and newsletters were searched for information and leads.

The 1976 edition of RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS IN NEW YORK STATE HISTORY appeared at the end of the summer of 1977 and was distributed free of charge to all public libraries, college libraries, historical agencies, and research centers in New York State. A supplementary printing in January 1978 permitted the Division of Historical Services to supply the 1976 edition to academic historians and to officially appointed local historians on request.

THE 1977 EDITION

The 1977 edition is even more comprehensive. As in the past, the intent was to list and describe all New York State history-related works that were either published, otherwise completed, or in progress during calendar 1977. Any work that presented new knowledge or a new viewpoint on any aspect of the history of New York State was eligible for inclusion. As in 1976, reprints and revised editions of out-of-print works were included while newspaper and newsletter features were not. Academic papers presented during calendar 1977 were included as work in progress.

The 1977 edition was compiled by distributing detailed questionnaires to publishers, writers, and teachers of New York history. Entry forms were sent to university and commercial publishers of books and periodicals on New York history, to college history department faculty members, to the more than 1,200 locally appointed historians across the State, to the 600-name mailing list of the College Conference on New York History, to over 600 research centers, historical agencies and history organizations in an out of New York State, to all those whose work was listed as being in progress in the 1976 edition, and to other known scholars of New York history who were not solicited in any of the other mailings. Notices advertising the project were printed in NEW YORK HISTORY magazine, in the newsletters of the Institute of Early American History and Culture, the New York State Bicentennial Commission, the New York State Studies Group, the Preservation League of New York State; and in numerous local historical society publications. In addition, staff members made personal appeals for assistance at professional meetings during the period July 1977 to June 1978. We take this opportunity to thank all of those who thus supported RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS IN NEW YORK STATE HISTORY in 1977.

This volume constitutes a definite improvement over any of its predecessors in terms of its comprehensiveness and means of presentation. The 1977 edition reflects a significant expansion in scope with the systematic inclusion of works in the fields of archaeology, military history, recreation, social and intellectual history, and women's history. Historical calendars, historic tour guides, and maps appear for the first time. The 1977 edition has moved in the direction of a more purely topical presentation with the discontinuance of the Biography, Documentary, Finding Aids, and Miscellaneous sections and the inclusion of works formerly listed in those sections under their appropriate subject.

The 1977 edition of RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS IN NEW YORK STATE HISTORY is organized in topical categories with each subject heading divided into "Published in 1977," "Additions to RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS-1976" (projects completed during 1976, but not included in the 1976 edition), and "In Progress During 1977" sections. These divisions appear in that order within each subject category. Within each section of each subject category, entries are listed alphabetically according to author or by subject if no author is identifiable. Although editors and compilers are acknowledged and indexed, their names have been subordinated to the subject in the alphabetical listing.

The basic bibliographical unit in this volume is the entry. Each topical category is composed of consecutively numbered entries. The entry lists the author's name, title of the work, and the facts of publication. An annotation further describes the work, summarizes the contents, or provides other essential information not contained in the facts of publication section. Works in progress are categorized as books (more than 100 pages), booklets (softbound), leaflets (ten or fewer pages), graduate theses (doctoral and Master of Arts), other typescripts available for examination, and journal and magazine articles.

A typical entry consists of its entry number; the author's surname, first name, and first middle initial - or an organization as author or the subject of the work supplied in brackets; the full title as it appears on the title page (or tentative title for works in progress or article title and periodical or parent volume title); the name of the compiler or editor; estimated completion date (ECD) for work in progress; place of publication

(New York State is understood); publisher's name and address; reprint or special edition information; number of pages; and graphics, documentary, and appendix information.

Each work listed has been assigned a unique entry number consisting of the letter designation for each topical category and a number for each item. The symbols appear in the Table of Contents. Capitalized letters refer to the "Published in 1977" sections, lowercased letters to the "In Progress during 1977" sections, and the letter prefix "76" refers to the "Additions to RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS-1976" sections. For example, the entry number "AR-3" identifies the third item in the "Published in 1977" section of the American Revolution category; the number "l-14" refers to the fourteenth item listed as being in progress in the Local History category; and "76RE-4" refers to the fourth item in the "Additions to RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS-1976" section of the Racial, Ethnic, and Women's History category.

The principal finding aid is the index. Every person, place, and thing in each entry (except for dates, publishers' names and addresses, and places of publication) is indexed. The user should rely on the index for efficient and fruitful use of this bibliography. Index references are to the entry numbers described above and not to pages.

Abbreviations have been utilized and periods eliminated wherever possible. Nonstandard abbreviations are listed on page xii. Titles of frequently cited journals and magazines also have been abbreviated. A guide to periodical abbreviations appears on page xiii. The facts of publication including subscription information for frequently cited periodicals are listed in a special appendix beginning on page 125. The full citations for less frequently used periodicals are found within each entry.

The 1977 edition of RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS IN NEW YORK STATE HISTORY reflects the hard work and willing cooperation of many exceptional people. Briane Celeste Bliven, a consultant, has served as our editorial associate for the past year. She contributed at all stages of compilation and production and finally prepared the lengthy index. Bruce Dearstyne, Karen Carmody, Denise Cashmere-Mac Farland, Robert Funk, John Leith, Pat Mc Mahon, Paul Schiere, and John Still, my colleagues in the State Education Department, have been of repeated assistance. We also acknowledge the cooperation of Gavin Peck and James Mc Lindon, student volunteers; Paul Huey of the Division for Historic Preservation; Anne Bland, Wendell Tripp, and Langdon Wright of the New York State Historical Association; Carl Romalis of the Electric Railroader's Association; Edward M. O'Connor of the Mid-York Library System; and Professor Judith Wellman of the New York State Studies Group.

INDEX

RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS IN NEW YORK STATE HISTORY is organized for fundamental reliance on the index. Every person, place, and thing in each entry, except for dates, publishers' names and addresses, and places of publication, has been indexed. Index references are to entry numbers and not to pages. Within each entry number, the letters refer to the topic section (see Table of Contents, page iii) and the numbers, to the alphabetically arranged and consecutively numbered entries within each category. Capitalized letter symbols denote a published work while lower-cased letters refer to research in progress. The Table of Contents lists the topic symbols. The capitalized topic symbol preceeded by the designation "76" signifies that the accompanying work was published, reprinted, or completed during 1976, but was not listed in RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS-1976.
